In today's transient society, few things remain the same for long periods of time. If they do not change, they quickly become outmoded and are soon replaced by more viable successors. But change is necessary—without it life would become stagnant and stale, routine would rule, and creativity would die.

Foreign policy, governmental decisions, the economy—each play a large part in determining the direction taken by the changes in a given period of time. Dissatisfaction with the nation's leadership is seen in the emergence of new political faces. In order to remain in contention for a position, incumbents must alter and modify their goals and ideals if they wish to remain in office.

Trends in the economy and in the availability of commodities affect the buying habits of Americans. Even such simple things as clothing styles have historically been the thermometers of economic fluxuations.

Business variations affect population trends and housing needs, which in turn affect employment in other fields. In the name of progress, landscapes are transformed from countryside to suburban annexes. Old images are dispelled as such changes take place, freeing cities from the bonds of stereotypical thinking.

Man cannot continue staticly, but is a microcosm embodying the changes that occur in the world around him. As he goes through life, he experiences many emotions and situations which play a part in forming his unique personality. Each incident takes something away from him but replaces it with a more complete counterpart. As he grows older, more privileges, decisions and responsibilities are forced upon him. He must not only accept the responsibilities, but also take with them the consequences of his independent action.

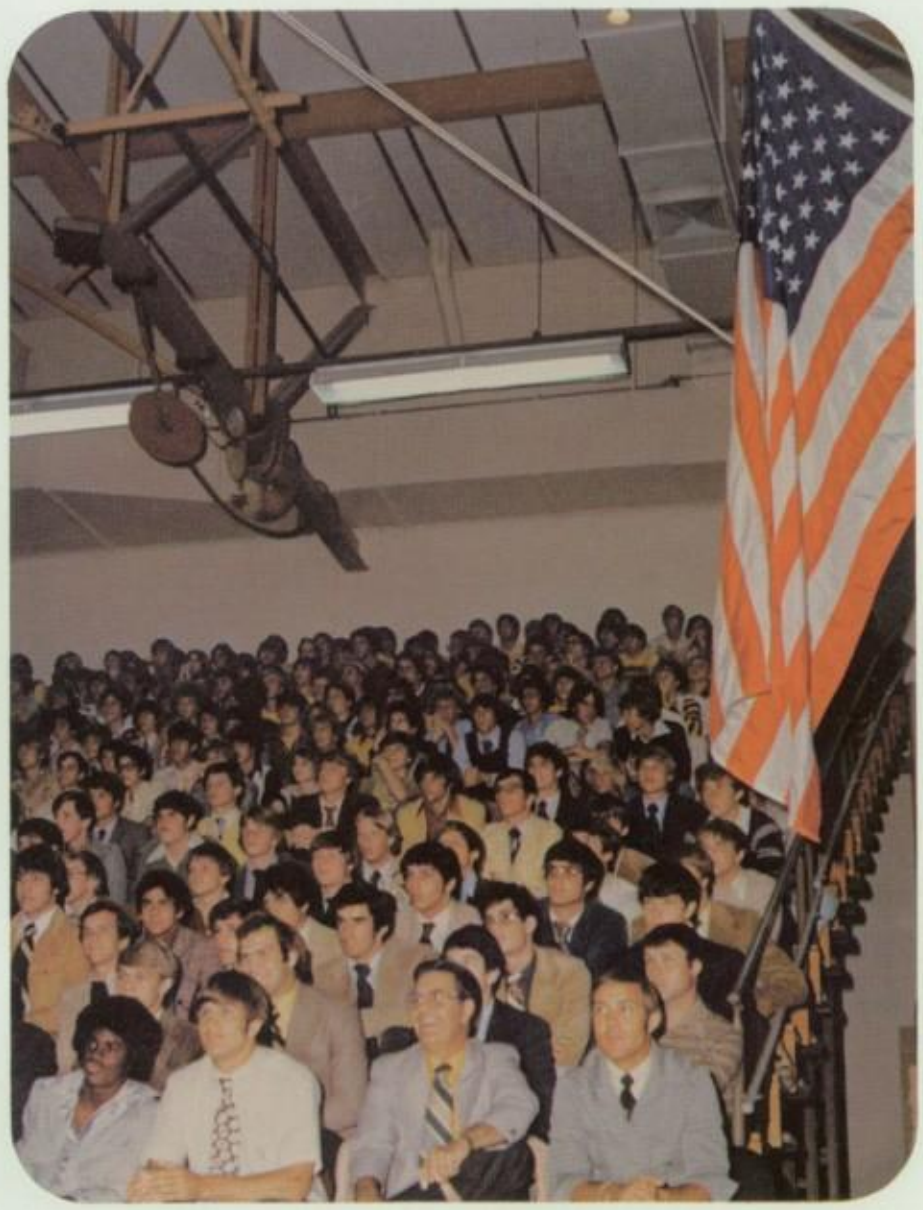
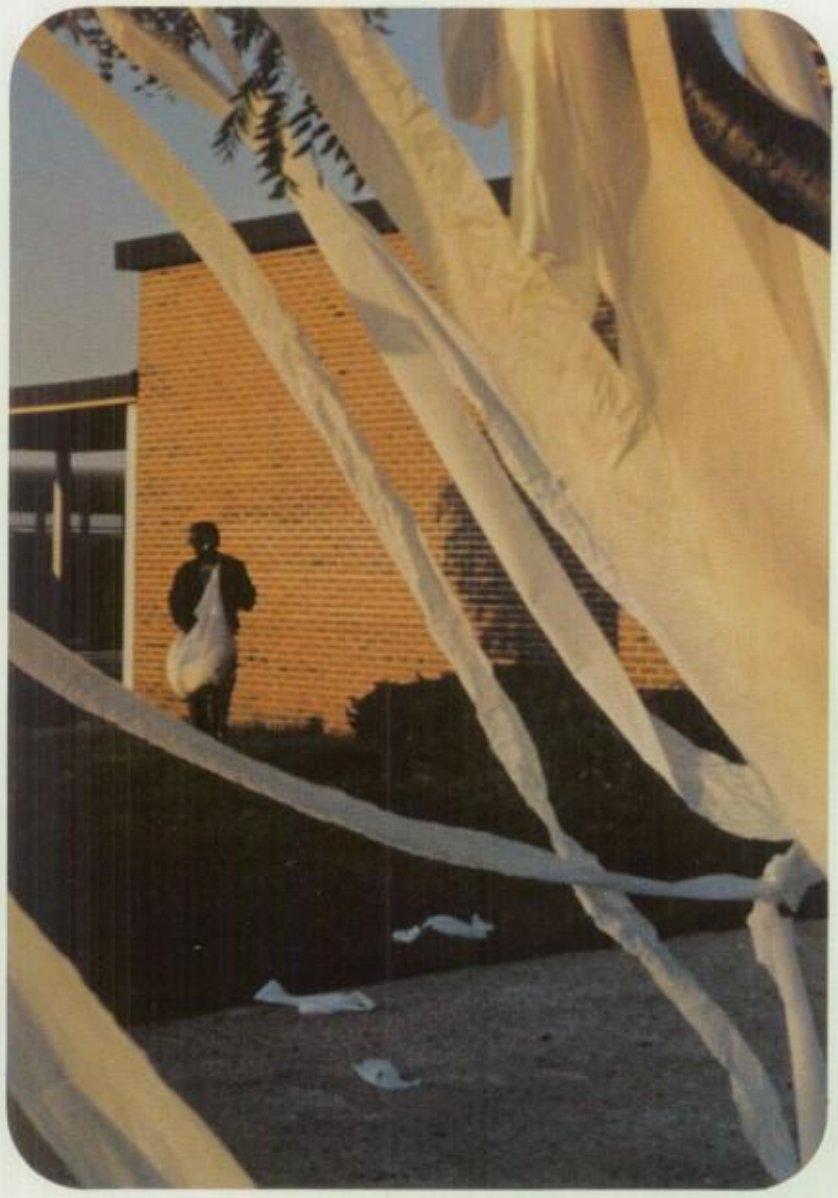
But all changes, rather reluctant or by choice, are necessary for the preservation of the process by which fresh, vital and new ideas and thoughts are formed.





Not only is the individual involved in his personal evolution, but he also must adapt to comply with changes made by those whose decisions have a direct effect on his life. In fact, variances with the most tangible effect—those in every day routine—are produced by unseen superiors who do not know and will never see what the results of their actions will mean to those affected by them. Once the changes are accepted, no matter how unwillingly, they themselves evolve from unfamiliar intruders in routine to a new customary habit.

As a place where an individual spends a large part of his life, school plays a major role in the shaping of that individual's character. Although many attend the same school, none leave with the same ideas or values. Because the policies and objectives of the administration and teachers—and also the school itself—change, no two people, no matter how similar, can end their education in the same institution and leave alike. For all people are composed of experiences and changes of their lifetimes.

Like a tornado that leaves behind an almost unrecognizable form of the landscape, a whirlwind of changes swept through South, erasing time-worn patterns and changing the present into the past.

Many juniors were transferred to East as a result of a boundary change last spring. Their loyalties were briskly uprooted, then left alone to be transplanted on unfamiliar ground.

Even those who remained had many new circumstances with which to deal upon returning to school in the fall. Beginning classes at 8:00 seemed traumatic at first, especially to bus riders. Accustomed to arriving forty minutes before the start of school, they suddenly found themselves barely in the door before the five minute bell rang. Removal of the bridge without a replacement necessitated smokers in the park finding a different route for the morning walk from Indian Creek Drive to the building.

During fourth hour, students at first found the scramble system not only confusing, but also slow. As with most things, practice prevented many people from a twenty minute wait in line. With the elemination of open lunch, those who still preferred to eat out had only twenty-five minutes to eat and run. They returned to class to find that the study period they expected to have had turned into an extra half-hour of class. For those people in performing groups it meant adjusting to ninty minutes of noonday sun instead of cool morning light on the practice field.

As the days wore on and adjustments were made, changes became the new routine, but the spirit remained and innovative ideas became realities. People no longer looked back wistfully to the way things had been, but concentrated on the way they were and the way they would be in the future.

Aspiring for perfection, students attend clinics

For students, summer vacation became an extension of the school year, filled with clinics and workshops. The Pacesetters attended the Kansas University Drill Team School, June 28 through July 2, while the Southettes attended the Drill Team World clinic, July 18-22, also at KU. Varsity cheerleaders attended a clinic at Iowa State University, July 22-26.

The cheerleaders received four blue ribbons and the Spirit Stick, given to denote the best team in attendance. In advance competition the Pacesetters were awarded first place in marching and third in pom-pom routine, receiving a total of 19 ribbons. Southettes won seven marching ribbons and the Touch of Class courtesy award. For having the most positivie and ambitious attitude, Linda Harrell received the Sparkplug Award, and Carol Dyke won third place in Top of the World performance competition. Eleven members received special recognition.

Bethany College in Lindsborg, Ks. was the site of literary workshops attended by journalism students. Students on the Patriot Staff attended a workshop July 24-26, and Heritage Staff members attended a similar workshop July 27-29. Both groups attended seminars on copy writing, layout, photography and financing. In addition, Heritage students heard suggestions for theme, execution of theme, use of artwork and competed in various yearbook related contest, where Student Life Editor Dave Kraus won first place in copy writing.

Students face summer choice

Summer break faced students with a difficult choice between work, school and fun. Summer school took up the time of a number of students from June to August when many took courses missed during the regular school year. For others summer offered a chance to recover from the rigors of school and prepare for fall. But for the majority, jobs or the search for jobs took up most of the summer. The motive for the wild pursuit of work proved to be simplicity itself for one senior. His reason? "I needed the money."

Audience relates well to fall play characters

Over 100 students auditioned for "The Member of the Wedding". Unlike other years, the play was chosen to suit the cast as opposed to the cast being chosen for a designated play. The subject of the play dealt with adolescence and the sense of belonging that one needs in the process of "growing up."

Five sell out performances were staged in the Little Theater "making the play a more personal experience for both actor and audience," according to Gerald Snider, director. Before the show and during intermissions, the top 40 songs from 1945 were played creating the mood for "The Member of the Wedding". Appropriate hair styles and costumes aided in the actors feeling their roles and the audience's awareness of the era.

Downpour puts damper on Homecoming beauty

Braving rainy weather and an 18 point halftime deficit in the game against Lawerence, the nine Homecoming candidates rode into the stadium in antique cars for the announcement of Susan Thomas' reign as queen. Last year's royalty crowned Kelly Kuehl and Meg Cundiff as attendents.

Janice Teller, the first junior to head the Homecoming Committee, faced many problems. After finalization of preparations for nine candidates, StuCo passed a proposal changing nominating procedures to include 15 girls. Preliminary voting eleminated six from final competition. Weather posed another difficulty as rain destroyed the float only a few hours before half-time. Frantic efforts restored it in time for the coronation.

At the dance, held the night after the game unlike previous years, Heritage Singers performed "The Way We Were" to carry out the theme. Two hundred-fifty couples watched as a re-enactment of the crowning took place at approximately 9 p.m.

Melanie reigns as Navy queen

On February 5 at the Johnson County Community College Commons the NJROTC held their ninth annual ROTC Ball. It served not only to provide enjoyment, but also to gain knowledge of the social etiquette encountered as an officer in the Navy. The ball remained the only district social funtion, and Commander Haggerton explained, "We are unique in this respect." Melanie Register attended by Carl Dietz, reigned as NJROTC queen; and Terry Berg, escorted by the Sergeant Major, won the crown of Anchorette queen. Drama, music repeat success in Oklahoma!

Performed in 1967 as the school's first musical, Rogers and Hammerstein's Oklahoma returned to South's stage February 24, 25 and 26. Consisting of eleven leads, numerous dancers and chorus members, the cast equaled over twice the size of the original Broadway production.

Dr. Don Donaldson, who directed the first production of Oklahoma, also had a hand in directing the 1977 version, while taking care of the musical's business aspects. Ms. Marie Lerner concerned herself with chorus members, Mr. Gerald Snider's responsibili'y laid with the actors, while Ms. Patty Beard oversaw technical aspects and Ms. Sharon Wiber choreographed the dance numbers. Several students served on crews putting in many long hours to aid in a successful production.

Compliments to the 1977 version of Oklahoma included a unique set designed by Risa Kleban, a larger chorus and over eight weeks of rehearsals. After one matinee and three evening performances, cast members attended a cast party given by returning Raiders from the first rendition of Oklahoma.

Technical crews vital for production success

The number of actors in Member of the Wedding and Oklahoma multiplied by two would reveal the approximate number of people who worked to put the productions together. Though the audience may not have realized the importance of the technical staffs' work, the actors did. The smoothness in sound and lighting, the quality of costumes and props and the appropriate setting all enhanced and complimented the acting. Publicity and ticket crews encouraged attendance and made the technical staff and cast members' efforts worthwhile.

In contrast to previous years, Oklahoma initiated a more professional system with two new positions; Master Electrican, who headed light and sound crews, and Master Carpenter, who took charge of painting and construction crews. Dave Henry occupied the position of Stage Manager, whose duties expanded to cover and oversee all aspects of the production not handled by the cast and directors.

Senior class size causes many election difficulties

After sifting through more than 600 senior summaries, Heritage staff members Kathy Brussell and Janice Teller chose 40 candidates for the honor of being Heritage Royalty. The summaries, voted on anonymously by the junior Heritage staffers to narrow the field to ten boys and ten girls, then became the subject of student attention during elections on January 27.

Traditionally chosen as the students who have contributed the most to the school during their acedemic careers, candidates are selected on the basis of accomplishments, personality and popularity among fellow students. Pictures of candidates and their senior summaries decorated the front hall between the nominations and the elections to enable the student body to become familiar with both the appearance and qualifications of the candidates.

Student transportation provided in many ways

Thirteen buses provided transportation to and from school each day; however, not all students took advantage of the service. Those living within two and one-half miles had to pay for the bus transportation, and most students found a more favorable means of reaching their destination.

Automobiles of all shapes and sizes proved the most popular way to transport oneself and one's friends to school. With Dad's Cadillac, Mom's stationwagon, ancient junk piles, sparkling Corvettes, vans, pick-ups, jeeps, economy cars and gas guzzlers and many many more the parking lot accommidated as many different personalities as the school building itself. Many of the vehicles belonged to an entire family; however, some people drove their own cars. These few were perhaps the most cared for of all the autos and often found taking up two parking spaces for protection.

Other modes of transportation included motorcycles, bicycles, walking, and parents. Each afternoon mothers, fathers or friends formed a line waiting for the 3:00 bell. The early morning traffic jams, the maze of people, cars and buses in the afternoons perhaps indicated the transitory society in which we live.

Interest held by assemblies

Student imput into the types of assemblies held at South became more organized. Lucille Kingsbury held the StuCo office of communication and media chairman. She and her committee were directly responsible for the Up With People concert held in mid-April. The student body enjoyed a shortened version of the Vespers concert on Dec. 17 and viewed cuttings from "Oklahoma!" on Feb. 24. Also Pep Club had at least one all-school assembly per each season. For Jo Carroll, criteria for planning assemblies included consideration of the educational and entertainment aspects of the event. The most important reason for assemblies, claimed Mrs. Carroll, was to get a break from the school routine.

Fashions exist forever to identify certain eras

Fads and fashions have set each generation apart from one another, giving each era its own uniqueness. Clothing styles have played the role of identification card for particular time periods, and as in previous years 1976 had its own source of identification.

Men and women shared the popular three-piece suit, and the ladies, to add variety, often substituted gouchos or a skirt for the usual pants. While men accented their suits with open collars and necklaces of gold, silver and beads, women put on the ties, bows and ascots. Corduroy seemed to be the desired fabric for this ensemble. Dress boots that zipped or casual western boots that pulled on, lent the proper effect and made the goucho outfit one of the most popular of the year.

In cold weather, coats took a turn towards nature; jackets, pant coats and full length coats in leather appeared on both men and women. Those out to stay warm made use of down filled coats.

Painter and drawstring pants, overalls, crew and cowl neck sweaters, corduroy, natural fibers during the day and silky, velvety fabrics at night became indicative of the '76 fashion scene. Dorothy Hamil gave America not only an incentive for short hair but the popular wedge cut. To compliment short hair styles, designers made necessary evils desirable by designing fashion eye wear. Though the metal frame remained, large plastic frames took over the number one spot.

Walking President adds twist to Inauguration

Jimmy Carter surprised Americans by walking all the way home to the White House after presenting his Inaugural address. The Carters, followed by Vice President Walter Mondale and his wife Joan, walked 1½ miles up the center stripe of Pennsylvania Avenue. In previous years Presidents have chosen the same route, but followed it behind bulletproff glass. "It was a symbol there was nothing to fear," said Florida's Democratic Governor Reubin Askew. President Carter's Inaugural speech was directed towards a crowd of 150,000.

Flu epidemic questionable

On March 24, 1976, President Gerald Ford proposed that a vaccination program be underway throughout the United States. On October 11, three people died within 48 hours after receiving the vaccine. By October 13, 35 elderly in 12 states died within 48 hours after receiving the vaccine. Simultaneously there was mounting evidence that the paralyzing Guillain-Barre syndrome was a reaction to the vaccine. Since October, 287 out of 571 cases of the Gullian-Barre syndrome had received the vaccine. Whether coincidental or not, these events provoked a controversy that lead to the suspension of the program.

The vaccination program was introduced in order to immunize United States citizens against a predicted swine-flu epidemic. The World Health Organization predicted in 1975, that by 1980 an epidemic would hit Asia, Europe and the United States. If it would become a reality, the epidemic could kill two billion people.

The swine-flu hit in the early 1900's. It proved the most devastating epidemic in the history of the world. American troops in Western France were affected and the virus spread through Europe and South Africa. In a period of 14 months it attacked 500 million.

Nomination process rejuvenated

The nomination process for both Homecoming and Sweetheart warranted renewal as revealed by the Student Council at the beginning of the year. A campaign led by Theresa Epperson ended in a rejuvenation of the system.

The new system allows for ten groups in the school to nominate one girl from within their organization. Six more girls are nominated by the Senior Class. This method was utilized for both nomination processes this year.

StuCo changes generate spark of new activity

Waves of alternations, triggered by changes in the sponsor and Constitution, swept over Student Council early in the fall. In its first year under a new Constitution, the organization became substantially smaller than in the past, totaling approximately 120 members. The cut in size attempted not to restrict StuCo or its functions, merely to make it more manageable. Among other things, the Constitution called for the instigation of two new positions, Sergeant at Arms and Parliamentarian. It also introduced new criteria for choosing Members at Large. The Executive Committee personally selected these extra members of StuCo on the basis of the applications they submitted.

StuCo set as its main objective the taking of a more active part in the school, by acting as a clearinghouse for other organizations. The committee met with various groups and clubs to see what kind of help they needed, and perhaps to arrange joint fund raisers. The selection of Homecoming candidates became a major StuCo issue in October, when members challenged the current system of nomination. After much controversy, the Council passed a measure outlining a complicated nominating procedure in which specific school groups entered candidates in the election, along with four general candidates selected by the Senior Class.

Gary Gordon, StuCo's new sponsor, found his inexperience at guiding such an organization a slight disadvantage initially, but he soon became eager to see the group and its plan succeed. He expressed a desire for StuCo to look at the entire student body as a whole, and to benefit as many different groups as possible. After viewing the give and takes that occur within StuCo, Mr. Gordon concluded that it constituted the "best government exercise" in the school. He believed that StuCo truly had the ability to serve as a valuable asset to South.

Foreign pupils still at heart of organization

South's International Club, created from foreign language classes, remained busy again this year with its variety of foreign exchange students. President Nancy Sherman stressed the need for South students to get to know these visitors, involve them in activities, and reach a point where the Americans and foreigners could learn from each other. This became her main objective for the club. Various functions and assemblies gave the student body a chance to meet and become acquainted with the exchange students.

The visitors to South were spon-sored by three different programs: American Field Service, Youth for Understanding and International Christian Youth Exchange. The club had to raise money to help pay the way of any AFS student, so members kept busy by selling popcorn balls and other items. International Club met on the last Tuesday of every month for a general meeting, and tried to sponsor one program a month.

SOS reinstates past standards

For the first time in three years, the South Outdoor Society limited its membership exclusively to Biology II students. In resorting to a previous format abandoned in 1973, the club no longer opened its doors to the general student body, but grew more selective. Approximately 45 juniors and seniors comprised the group of energetic individuals who strove to improve their knowledge of science and nature.

The various field trips taken by the club highlighted the year's activities. The first outing in October took the members to the chalk beds of western Kansas, where they uncovered ancient fossils and bones during their campout. Other short trips around the area included visits to seminars and conventions. The club supported its own ventures by selling football concessions.

three hours eliminated the need for special group meetings, and his day-to-day contact with the students increased the club's communication and unity. For the first time in the history of S.O.S., no definite officers controlled the group. Instead, an advisory committee of three members from each of the Bio II classes met weekly with Mr. Hampton to discuss current activities and to plan for future expeditions.

Offbeat groups provide variety

The Categories team began its '76 season in high spirits, and with good reason. By December, the team had established a 14 game winning streak extending from the previous spring. Categories had strong leadership from returning members Dave Kraus, Jeff Perry, Bill Menezes, Bob Dixon and Doug Shelton. Chris Becicka, team sponsor, lent her own brand of enthusiasm to the group. The team, which competed in trivia matches with the other five district high schools, developed its winning style through diligent weekly practices. Ac tual competitions aired on televisio underwent video-taping at various in tervals, highlighting five-membe teams chosen before each taping o the basis of practice point total Since no one has ever limited th areas of questions, topics for the tea ranged from cell biology to curren events. The Show Me South Club provided a variety of services this year. Among other things, it aided in sophomore orientation, helped to aquaint new students with the policies and schedules of South, and held functions for club members and newcomers to the school. According to Lucille Kingsbury, president, the club actually became a "public relations group", interacting with other organizations as well. Sponsored by counselor Philip Larson, the group drew recognition as the only one of its kind in the district. Club members assembled every other Wednesday morning in the library conference room to discuss current business and plan upcoming events. The size of the group fluctuated, with its busy seasons coming at the beginning of each semester.

Money making is class project

DECA's 91 members furthured their knowledge of marketing and retailing by first hand experience. They learned to work with businessmen to increase their knowledge of business. All members involved themselves in the fund raising projects planned by sponsor Vicki Jennings. The projects included a candy lottery, key chain sales and Christmas candy delivery by Santa.

Juniors learned the basic rules and skills of marketing and retailing in hours three and four. The students attended various luncheons and listened to well-informed speakers who talked on different aspects of the business world.

Twenty-four seniors advanced into Marketing and Retailing II which met first hour. Required to obtain a job these students went out to work during the time block of fifth and sixth hour while receiving full credit towards graduation for both hours of on-the-job training.

Females aid others in need

South's official hostesses, the Anchorettes, kept busy with a mixture of serious and fun activities. They served as an extention of ROTC as they marched in pre-game shows for both football and basketball. The group also found time to march in the Veteran's Day Parade and to serve as guides for the parents during Back to School Night. The organization, sponsored by Sergeant Major Land, constructed candy wreaths for Christmas decorations to be put up around the school, essentially in the offic area, for one of their service projects The Anchorettes decided to rais funds for the multiple sclerosi research fund and to pay for thei yearbook ad. They made money b raking leaves in the fall, stagin several bake sales and from profit made in an evening from a basketba concessions stand. The economy minded girls decided to make onl one all-year uniform. Amy MacCurd filled the office of captain.

Men join all girl club for first time

After ten years of the all girl pep club at South, changes took place which allowed boys to participate in the pep club and add an extra sound to the organization. The squad got its official beginning at the close of football season with a prerequisite for all determined basketball yell leaders to join in to add to the total spirit of the Raider Pep Club.

Under the leadership of the six officers, headed by President Jennifer Beardsley and sponsor Dr. Don Donaldson, the executive committee expanded to include the committee chairmen, and 15 junior girls appointed as team captains selected through previous outstanding work and dedication. This made the executive committee the largest ever and included almost 40 girls. The work with the captains proved to be quite successful and gave each individual girl a team to share her work with and to identify with in the large group of 500 members.

Same horse has new rider

Raider Mascot Vicki Dunn extended a tradition started by her two sisters in 1967. After every touchdown at a home game, Vicki charged in front of the home stands on her horse, Rosie the Raider. Vicki and Rosie remained a great asset to South spirit as did Twirlers and Raiderettes.

The number of Twirlers declined to two as opposed to six last year. Under sponsor Janet Rosecrans, Deena Corn and Lisa Mensch, dressed in new uniforms, participated in all marching band activities. Deena outrated the number one twirler in the nation when she won Miss Bicentennial Hi-Point last September. Featured in several half-time performances, Deena impressed the crowds with her use of fire batons and knives. "It's scarey when you first start using them," said Deena, "but as you practice it gets easier."

Girls parade vivacity, flags as Southettes

For the second year in a row, South's Flag Team began its fall season with a new sponsor. Members of the Southettes did not see this turnover as a hindrance, however, and Captain Dana McDaneld called it a change "for the best." She described the new advisor, Coach Billie Rice, as creative, dedicated, and a definite asset to the group. Flag Team practices began in the summer following the yearly spring tryouts. For the first time, the girls attended a Drill, Flag and Pompon Clinic at Kansas University on July 19-25. There they met with drill and flag teams from other schools and learned about new routines.

Fall football games featured the Southettes twice, and the group also performed at some home basketball games. In addition, Flag Team participated in the district and state marching festivals, along with South's other performing groups. Co-captain Maureen Lueke called the festivals "fantastic", and felt the team put on "the best show ever."

Flag Team, like all marching groups, met fourth hour this year. The girls found their new practice time "hot", and had to constantly battle the grasshoppers and bees that also occupied the fields. Nevertheless, spirit and enthusiasm ran high within the Southettes, and group unity seemed to have reached a peak. Members felt that the friendships they made while in Flag Team would remain most important to them.

Pacesetter's work, practice pays off yearly

Teachers at the summer marching clinic held at KU witnessed the performances of many groups, including the Pacesetters under the direction of their sponsor Sharon Wiber and officers, Captain Amy Pritchett, Co-Captain Susan Thomas, Secretary Nancy Kelpe and Treasurer Jane Adams. Performances of the Drill Team included half time shows at all home football games and various basketball games. A special performance at the Big Eight Tournament during Christmas vacation consisted of both present and alumni members. The 40 member precision marching group also appeared at Haskell Indian College in Lawrence. Many extra practices and long hours during football season aided all marching groups to a hard earned number one rating at the Shawnee Mission and Wichita Marching Festivals.

The highlight of the year for the group consisted of their '77 Extravaganza, entirely planned and prepared by the group members.

Cheerleaders keep stomping for home team

The junior varsity and sophomore cheerleading squads acquired an enthusiastic new sponsor this year in Linda Wiersch, biology teacher. JV captain Kathy Lefko believed that Miss Wiersch did a "great" job in organizing the cheerleaders, and lent much support to the girls. Tryouts took place in mid-September. Members of the faculty and the varsity cheerleaders selected the first cuts, and Pep Club voted on second cuts. Eight girls chosen during the tryouts composed each of the final squads.

All the cheerleaders kept busy this year providing spirit for a variety of events. Both squads attended all designated functions involving teams of their grade, plus the varsity games and meets. In addition, the cheerleaders participated in the weekly Friday morning pep rallies preceding every major weekend game. Even with their sometimes gruelling schedules, the girls enjoyed supporting the diligent teams.

Cheerleaders excel at clinic

The Varsity Cheerleaders attended the annual cheerleading clinic last August held on the Iowa State University campus in Ames, Iowa. Although uncomfortably hot, the girls returned home with honors. They received a blue ribbon every night for cheering excellence and won the overall award for the best squad at the competition. To repay the school for the trip, the girls worked hard at fund raising through the year by selling such delicacies as jolly ranchers and licorice.

The group enjoyed a year marked by "itching britches" and "percolating". Even though they contended with several soggy football games the cheerleaders donned yellow slickers and managed to keep in good spirits.

The yell leaders reduced their numbers to four this year to avoid confusion. Three gymnastically inclined basketball yell leaders added crowd pleasing flips to the cheering agenda.

Administrative decisions cause numerous changes

Changes were initiated affecting the entire school and administration itself with the initiation of a lengthened school day and the installment of a new vice-principal.

The Board of Education's decision to begin classes one half hour earlier for purposes of unifying the District gave students the advantage of an activity period during their fourth hour classes. For many athletic and performing groups who previously held practices in the early morning, the new schedule created great inconvenience forcing them to rehearse in the heat of mid-day or late hours at night. With the entire student body subsequently arriving at one time, daily traffic jams resulted in disadvantages as well.

Plans to reorganize administrative titles and duties to create three vice-principal positions included the appointment of Mr. Dave Pendleton to his new office. Replacing Dr. Richard Barrett, Mr. Pendleton became involved with student discipline, curriculum, teacher evaluation and the student teacher program in his first year as a senior high school vice-principal.

Counselors individualize services for all students

At great benefit to the students, the counselors prided themselves on "individual counseling." They catered to the diversified needs of the students, parents and teachers. Many counselors participated in extra-cirricular activities. James McCoy headed the International Club, Phil Larson sponsored the Show Me South Club and Ann Gresham headed cadet teaching.

As a growth out of the counselors' job the Career Center helped students come to an understanding of themselves and the future of their lives. Dennis Butler and Reve Wilson provided students with as much information as they could, later to be analized by each student. Individual interests and personality provided a "general-cluster" of possible careers. The course included group participation, philosophies on sexual roles, business tactics and a diverse range of speakers. A fourth period open guidance hour welcomed students not enrolled in the class.

Although the location of the bookstore made access much easier, business did not increase. When term paper time rolled around, plastic folders sold out and Mr. Huer, the manager, claimed, "Those bic pens go like wild."

Librarian adds diverse dimension to his role

Along with a constant barage of new records, books and magazines, the library, an integral part of the student services, added a new member to its staff. Phil Rambow became a librarian "through the back door." His diversified education includes two bachelor degrees and two masters degrees. After serving in the army, teaching art and designing, he settled on library work. "I truly made the right decision," claimed Mr. Rambow. He incorporated his hobby of photography by starting the production of an "orientation to the library" slide and tape presentation.

Students who desired to improve their reading enrolled in Bob Hansen's reading class. He made it a developmental course by emphasizing improvement of reading skills through comprehension, vocabulary and speed. A new program of independent study in reading started with Alana McQuire. Mr. Hansen mentioned he would like to see future students try this mature approach to study.

Geered to "mainstreaming" students instead of "pulling them out," the Learning Center set up a full-scale classroom with services available to students at all levels. Mary Jane Clifton introduced P.S.A., personal and social adjustment, as a "prescriptive-diognostic" program. Free and flexible, each student utilized the program in an individual approach.

All adjust successfully to new lunch program

In search of improved methods to prepare and serve th noon meal, the state of Kansas issued the decision t modify the high school lunch program in the Shawnee Mis sion District. With continuing successful results the scram ble system, modeled from procedures presently effective i many colleges, could spread statewide in future years.

Cafeteria and custodial staffs adjusted their duties t accommodate the system which provided an expande choice of items to students and faculty. Although more sta and time were required to prepare the numerous Type and ala carte menues, satisfied customers wasted less food therefore, reducing cleanup time. Perpetuating a rise i snack bar sales of more than double from last year, th kitchen staff worked to accommodate student preference as overseer Marguerite Swafford commented, "Menu plan ning involves a lot of guesswork; we had to adjust to wha students like best."

English students study sources of word origins

English 11 entered into a more individualized approach as students built up their work areas of vocabulary, literature, spelling, composition and grammar. Ms. Alicia Lewis' remedial classes emphasized a program of this type, tying together reading short stories, writing and vocabulary. This program placed all of the responsibility on the students to complete weekly work in each of these areas. Ms. Lewis' students also studied language and dialects. Three foreign students and students from various regions of this country provided the ideal sources of information to compare the use of language in different geographical areas. Students were required to observe language patterns in their families and community in order to compile lists of words and phrases native to this and other areas. They also studied the origin of the English language. Ms. Lewis attempted to help her foreign students understand American humor by having them read examples of various types of humor. Much discussion also centered around the cinema, with comparisons of the same film being shown in two different countries.

Core English program goes to three quarters

"Back to the basics!" became the familiar cry in the Language Arts Department, although students and teachers understood that the school never actually abandoned this philosophy. In order to provide more time in which to teach the basics of grammer and sentence structure, the core—or basic—program for all three grade levels was extended to three nine-week grading periods, while only the last quarter of the year remained the slot for short courses.

Students in Fern Coffin's classes spent part of the core program in a short story project in which the students read the varied selections in the book 29 Short Stories. As a follow-up project, each student read additional works by and about that author which appealed to him the most. Ms. Coffin designed the project to tie in with the material presented in Thought and Statement, one of the main texts used to teach Senior English.

Remedial class formed; honors classes dropped

One of the six Algebra I classes was converted into a special class for students having difficulty in math. The class went at a slower pace and emphasized different aspects of algebra. It gave students a degree of success who might have otherwise dropped from the math program.

Although Algebra II honors classes remained separate, the trigonometry honors classes no longer existed. Juniors and seniors learned together in a mixed class. Besides many scheduling difficulties, this arrangement became necessary when many students dropped from the honors program thinking a regular class would be easier.

In sciences, extra classes increase depth

More students enrolled in higher levels of science then ever before. For the first time the science department formed four advanced biology classes, including one Biology II class for advanced placement.

The Science Department made another first by forming a second semester Field Tech II class. The students from the class worked alongside the Biology II students to build a solar-powered greenhouse in SMESL. Beer cans comprised the solar radiation heater.

Social Science develops American Studies class

American Studies became a new addition to the Social Science curriculum this year. This study program, developed and implemented by Carolyn Simmons and Gary Gordon, proved popular by the number of those enrolled. Instead of presenting the vast knowledge of American history in chronological order, the instructors chose themes. From this the students were given the opportunity to gain a conceptual understanding of our nation and its development. The Social Science Department offered this course as an alternative to students in choosing their required and elective credits.

According to Jay Roberson, department head, because of diminishing student enrollment it grew difficult to develop new courses. Psychology and world history enrollments increased this year possibly as a result of the department discontinuing courses offered last year. South welcomed Bill Steigemeier as a new psychology instructor.

NJROTC chooses girl as commanding officer

Based on their grades, academic ability, involvement in extra curricular activities, military bearing and leadership potential, four seniors gained the position of Commanding Officer, each student in charge of one nine week period. In previous years only two students, one per semester, held the position; however, due to the large number of seniors enrolled, the Naval Science instructors felt more students deserved this opportunity. Melanie Register, Commanding Officer during the second quarter, became the first girl to hold the office in NJROTC history at South. Larry Erickson, Keith Wiedenkeller and Kevin Dwyer also carried the title of Commanding Officer during first, third and fourth quarter. Commander Haggerton chose the officers, who in turn chose six additional officers for various billets in the organization. These student staffs organized and scheduled all inspections and formations and also covered parades, the Navy Ball, game half-times and graduation, depending upon the quarter.

The two extra curricular groups, the Drill Team and Rifle Team stayed active this year. While the Drill Team performed at games, exhibition drills and other public appearances, the Rifle Team practicing safety and good marksmanship, fired weekly and entered into competition with other NJROTC units around the United States.

Language adds complete year to course plan

French and Spanish teachers throughout the district produced a program which expanded the curriculum to include an additional year, making the French and Spanish programs six years long. A decided advantage to the extension was that teachers had more time to branch out into supplementary projects such as games, skits, films and recordings. Teachers also provided more time to develop conversational skills.

Instead of forming separate language clubs for the advanced students as in past years, language teachers offered extra credit to students who participated in International Club activities. This arrangement helped to boost the membership of the club.

'Notehand' stimulates determined students

Desiring to fill the needs of the academically oriented student, the Business Department picked up a new course known to most students as "Notehand" but officially titled "Notetaking". In addition to the mechanics of shorthand, notetaking students learned how to listen to a speaker, how to recognize and record major points, and how to use helpful research and library techniques. Rhoda Hussey, department chairperson, believed that the addition of notetaking to the curriculum, plus the fact that male students are more willing to take notetaking than shorthand, caused enrollment in shorthand classes to decline.

A new project in the Personal Finance classes called upon students to prepare their entire budget for their first year out of high school. Students chose either a college, trade school, or full-time employment and beginning from these, calculated their living expenses for the entire year.

Auto II classes build Corvette from ground up

In cooperation with auto body repair classes, the seniors in Auto Tech II rebuilt a Corvette from the ground up. While advanced classes learned about auto servicing and design, the Auto Tech I students studied the basics of automotive history and construction. On Tuesday and Thursday evenings, students from all over the district met in South's auto shop to attend a newly offered course in auto body repair.

In woodworking classes students learned methods of wood construction and then utilized classroom facilities to run their own shop, where speaker cabinets proved to be the most popular project. New materials, including A-V equipment and new servicing equipment for the auto shop were added to the curriculum.

Boys discover female duties necessary evils

Heading for college or starting a family, the headstart which Home Economics classes offer made them popular with students. The department proudly expanded to five full time instructors, necessitated by the increased enrollment in the 15 courses ranging from simple to advanced. Despite the female stereotype these classes traditionally carry, male enrollment in Bachelor Living and many other sections rose as well. Most boys not only enjoyed the new experiences in sewing, food preparation and consumer education, but also found the knowledge extremely valuable for future "survival".

The exciting and rewarding experience of working with youngsters was available to more students with two exploring childhood programs. The course which required no prerequisite, entailed two class days and three days volunteering in various area schools each week.

Art classes give relief to academic schedules

Offering new horizons to challenge one's creativity, art classes provided many students with a necessary break from rigid academic pursuits.

Whether soldering a sterling bracelet or painting a farm near the school grounds, the exciting activities of the various art classes also entailed a great deal of learning. After fulfilling the basic requirements of Art I and enrolling in one of the specialized areas such as water color, jewelry or commercial art, practice and patience had to be exerted to master the abundance of difficult new techniques. Although many found the activities and atmosphere of the courses a refreshing break from the pressures of academic subjects, those who enrolled expecting an easy ride were quickly enlightened.

Girls gain knowledge by eliminating electives

Due to computer mistakes and the limited scope of last year's physical education program in which students chose one course per quarter, girls P.E. went back to a general course, covering a wide and varied spectrum. The girls' department felt young girls needed an overall view of the opportunities available to them in the field of physical activities. Sharon Wiber stated, "We want the young women of today to be physically fit and feminine."

Girls P.E. gained a new faculty member, Sheri Brosseau. Mrs. Brosseau stated she was pleased with her job and added that South was a very enjoyable school. In addition to her new position on the staff, Mrs. Brosseau coached girls volleyball.

Boys P.E. remained the same with two choices from combinations of four courses. Emphasizing physical fitness, the staff encouraged awareness of the body and what students could do to enhance their own physical fitness. The department concerned themselves with the individual and his growth physically and mentally. Both groups of P.E. teachers advocated growth as a person and learning to interact with others.

Bands utilize teamwork to refine musical skills

The hours of tedious practicing exerted by the Raider Marching Band and Pep Band not only accomplished an excellent ability to perform, but also perpetuated a spirit of togetherness and friendship throughout the groups. The many Pep Band members were divided into two groups this year to ease their fantastically busy schedule of performances at games, assemblies and rallies. Ordained the Green and Gold Pep Bands, the organizations refined and coordinated their musical skills by practicing before school several mornings a week.

Drilling this year during fourth hour, with occasional rehearsals after school, the Marching Band strived for precision in their intricate performances for parades and pregame and halftime football shows. Under the experienced leadership of Jim Cochran and the coordinated efforts of Martin Green, Terri Garrison and Jeanne Halver as officers, the Rompin' Stompin' Raider Band attained superior ratings at the State and District Marching Festivals. Although the season officially ended in November, the bonded group retained its special unity through social events in the year. Most members continued their participation in music during the second semester by joining either the concert or Symphonic Band.

Bands' elections choose two executive boards

Auditions determined which students would participate as members of either Concert Band or Symphonic Band. Symphonic Band was composed mainly of those once in Marching Band. Hours two and four in room 235 swelled each day with music. After laborious rehearsels, both bands performed at the Tri-state Music Festival in Enid, Oklahoma, and Masterworks.

Once selected, the individual bands elected officers to aid in the organization and comradery of the musicians. The elected presidents of the Symphonic and Concert bands were Martin Green and Mike Hermes. Positions filled under them included vice-presidents, secretaries, librarians and historians. The historians' responsibilities included the creation of a plaque with pictures of senior band members. From carnations on Valentine's Day to popcorn sales, fund-raising chairpeople organized such activities in order to finance the bands' many programs.

Jazz bands do night club act

An "evening of jazz" was created by the jazz bands, offering the student body four hours of jazz music in a night-club atmosphere. The focus of study by the two groups was the basic technique of reading and improvising jazz.

South's orchestra met daily during sixth hour under the direction of Bruce Williams. Mr. Williams, who has taught at South for only one year, "came looking for a new challenge and found it here." The orchestra performed at State Music Festival, Vespers and Masterworks with both classical and contemporary arrangements. After auditions, a select group of orchestra members were chosen to play in the pit orchestra for the musical "Oklahoma".

Exhibiting their abilities throughout the year, Concert Choir 1 students manifested their vocal talents in many concerts. The large mixed choir, chosen by junior high teacher reccomendation, highlighted the year with the annual Spring Patio Concert. In order to prepare themselves for the State Music Contest, the Sophomore Mixed Ensemble and the Sophomore Treble Ensemble practiced diligently once a week before school. The Mixed Ensemble consisted of sixteen sophomores and the Treble Ensemble included fifteen sophomore girls. Selected by audition in the fall, these students capitalized their talents at various other concerts throughout the year.

Vocalists commission composer of St. Louis

After commissioning a composer in St. Louis to write a piece especially for the group, the Chanticleers planned their trip to St. Louis where they intended to perform the song for music majors and choir members at Washington University. The St. Louis trip marked a highpoint in the Chanticleers year.

The girls performed several times throughout the year. Annual events included the Invitational Clinic held the first part of February. During the clinic five schools came by invitation to perform for one another, and at the end of the clinic the schools consolidated under the direction of the guest clinician, Dr. Duncan Couch. Other annual events included Christmas Vespers, an invitational concert for family and friends and the State Music Contest. Chanticleers also performed for the National Organization for Women during their conference in October.

Chanterelles, a small ensemble of 18, selected from women in Chanticleers and Acappella, experienced their first year as a class. In previous years Chanterelles met before or after school as an extra curricular activity.

Though both groups performed quite often, the Chanterelles did more performing in the community than Chanticleers, singing for different civic groups. Chanterelles also took part in Christmas Vespers and the State Music Contest. Both groups worked for good vocal technique while singing good literature for treble choir.

Open to all boys, Men's Chorus included those no previously involved in music and boys from other musica groups who enjoyed additional singing. The Chorus, an ex tracurricular activity, practiced before school o Wednesdays with a weekly turnout of 35 to 40 boys. Perfor ming in school concerts, the group also sang by invitation a a Kansas City King's basketball game.

Choraleers, a mixed choir, consisted of students in a grades. The group, designed to prepare students for selec choirs, concentrated on a variety of music from earl traditional choral to the most contemporary works. I March, clinician Mel Hart from UMKC, directed an critiqued the group in special arrangements as a first tim activity for Choraleers.

Singing groups chosen from 68 member choir

Considered by Don Donaldson as "the center of the music department", the 68 member Acappella choir concentrated its efforts on learning highly selective concert material and various other difficult arrangements. The only robed choir in the school busied themselves in December by making a Christmas tape for WHB and prepared in the spring for the State Music Contest and District Choir Festival, both held in April. The year's culmination occurred in the Acappella Spring Concert, totally directed and designed by the singers themselves.

Composed of select choir members from Acappella, the Heritage singers performed both for the school and at small community functions. The third annual Heritage Invitational took place on December 16 in the school cafeteria and in the next few weeks after, the 30 juniors and seniors went Christmas caroling at various shopping centers. Reinstatement of the Spring Tour became a reality as both the Heritage and Acappella choirs traveled to Wichita to perform at various schools there.

Open only to male members of Acappella, Varsity Men spent the year singing a variety of men's literature, such as Negro spirituals, traditional sea shanties and some show music. Wearing vested suits, the choir's popularity grew as country clubs frequently asked them to perform. The 18 boys put on a special clinic at Indian Creek and prepared in the spring for numerous concerts.

Debate team continues traditional strong squad

Debaters continued a South tradition by maintaining a strong debate squad. They produced a solid year and tied for first place four times in sweepstakes. N.F.L., the National Forensics League, not to be confused with the National Football League, created another tradition by electing officers from its honorary members.

Repertory theater, a class which introduces students to the field of entertainment, presented a 30 minute production of Elizabethan drama. As a complete student production, the sixteenth century English village traveled to several elementary schools. Many student directed productions took place, such as the evening of one act plays in December. Gerald Snider chose the directors from those who showed an interest in the area. He stayed close by to offer suggestions, but never directly solved any problems that arose. He felt the student directors learned more from correcting their own mistakes.

Clements runs copying center as full-time job

"My job is composed of many little jobs," explained Arthur Clements, head of the Production Center, where teachers used a variety of machines to duplicate numerous materials for their classes. Clements headed the Center full-time, unlike last year, when he combined the job with teaching in the Industrial Arts Department.

Clements visited the junior high schools at the end of the year to recruit much-needed assistants for the '77-'78 school year. His early recruitment insured his finding "dependable students who like to work," eliminating the task of coaxing the students out of study halls at the beginning of the year.

Four new machines were added to the Center: the hole-punch, the paper-cutter, the booklet-binder and the light table. With the addition of the new equipment, the Center remained indispensable to teachers.

Inscriptions provides outlet for creative ideas

A publication for students and by students, Inscriptions remained the only one of its kind at South. Jan Breece, Inscriptions sponsor, explained it as a "place where students can see their creativity in published form."

Inscriptions had a larger staff than ever before. Ms. Breece screened each student expressing a desire to be on the staff then carefully picked the most capable workers. The staff had the job of critiquing all contributions and rating their quality, the "number one item."

Ms. Breece felt the magazine presented a unique opportunity. If a student had the interest and the ability without taking the advantage of having it printed, it became everyone's loss.

Patriot adds material, revises staff functions

Several changes in the style of its publication faced the Patriot staff. The paper took on a new, more featurish format, focusing on events in and around school. The staff also added two running columns to the Patriot, "Baron Von Kraus' Vinyl Circus", Dave Kraus' record review and Andy Maisel's "Living Naturally", a column informing students on nutritional eating habits. The staff voted to say goodbye to the "little crier" as it introduced a contemporary-style flag. Judy Dreiling added her two lab assistants to the masthead as proofreaders, whereas in previous years the printers proofread all copy for the staff. Neff Printing took over as the printers for all of the newspapers in the district, and the staff also received photo proof copies of each issue of the paper. The selection of headline types grew from the original three to 21, allowing the writers more choice of headline styles. Journalism students also welcomed a new, larger light table to aid them in pasting up "dummy" layouts.

Making changes no easy task

Change truly had an important impact upon the 1977 Heritage, as modifications in both staff and book were made with the goal of improving the yearbook quality of foremost consideration. The first progressive action, taken last May to equalize the various responsibilities, involved the reorganization of the book's various sections and the assignment of editor positions to each. As work continued through the summer at meetings and workshops, the annual's desperate need for a refreshing pace and outlook attracted special attention and was solved by planning new dimensions for layout, art work, photography and copy. Near the end of the summer the theme "Transience, the Quality of Change", appropriate to the individual school year to come, materialized after an intense three day yearbook institute attended by adviser Judy Dreiling, photographer Dave Kraus and editor Kristi Smith. The enlarged staff, overcoming problems of the new organization, proceeded to encompass the theme and record the year's events with creativity.

Allison, Henry pursue interest in government

Principal Wallace Johnson chose Frank Allison and David Henry to represent the student body at the 1976 Boy's State. The six day government training session, housed at the KU campus from May 31 to June 5, is sponsored annually by the American Legion to educate youth interested in political procedure. Both participants, who have played active role in student council and other activities, hoped to apply the knowledge to future activities.

The administration proudly made the announcement of 20 promising students as National Merit Semifinalists on Sept. 16. These participants of the 1975 PSAT test qualified as members of the top ½ of one percent of college and high school students nation wide, by obtaining a score of 193 or higher. By continuing their course of accomplishment and scoring well on the SAT test to become National Merit Finalists, they may receive various college or corporation scholarships. Letters of commendation were also awarded to 17 students who scored in the top two percent.

Conferences, exchanges complete NHS program

Desiring to serve the community, the National Honor Society officially organized, electing officers and holding regular meetings. The move to unify the group "was an outgrowth of students talking," according to Jim McCoy, the club's sponser. In the past years, election to NHS has been an honorary position, unaccompanied by formal fellowship with other members. A major project was to reword the charter and by-laws, and to institute the use of candidate biographies to aid selection of new members. Another project involved arranging student exchanges with NHS chapters at other area schools, where members attended each others' meetings and sat in on other schools' accelerated classes. Meeting attendance was nearly 100%, positive proof of the club's new undertaking.

Candidates for Quill and Scroll, the honor society for high school journalists, participated in a district-wide initiation ceremony at Shawnee Mission Northwest on April 12. The program included a speaker of interest to the candidates and the traditional candle-lighting ceremony. A reception in honor of the initiates and their parents followed.

Football team keeps custom one more year

Keeping with the tradition of never having a losing season, the Varsity Football Team completed its year with a respectable 5-4 record, capped off with an impressive 27-10 victory over SM East. Last year's state championship caused many to believe this year's team did not live up to certain expectations. A stronger offense than defense, a rarity for South, resulted in two close defeats as the defense failed to minimize the opponents' scoring efforts. High scoring generally prevailed as the offense relied heavily on its running game with fullback Mark Sutherland rushing over a 1000 yards in only eight games.

Coach John Davis and his four assistant coaches began practices in mid-August as 70 boys came out for the team. Physically, the squad emerged with a tremendous amount of strength in the offensive line of Greg O'Halloran, Frank Allison, Spencer Jones and Bob Fiss. However, the power did not compensate for what the team lacked in quickness and speed. Jeff Haun, a starting junior on the team, played effectively in both his offensive and defensive positions. The season began with a 34-19 triumph over KC Southwest followed by a heart-breaking one point loss to Raytown South. Both offense and defense played their best games in a 34 point shutout over SM Northwest. Even the season's final win could not make up for the disappointing year as it only enabled South to tie for third in the league.

Opening the season with a win over K.C. Southwest, the Junior Varsity Football Team finished the season with a 3-5 record, despite numerous injuries to valuable players. Keeping the Raider spirit, the team pushed on and buried S.M. Northwest Cougars 34-7. Chris Sutter, split end, and Dennis Lindsey, safety, made outstanding defensive efforts throughout the season. Squads display superb defense

Catching opposing teams off guard with versatile running talent and varied pass plays, the Green Team rolled to a glorious 8-0 season. Coached by Bill Spencer and Bill King, the squad compiled an average of 33 points a game while the opposition scored less than five points per game. The punt return team, known as the "Bellringers", contributed their efforts by returning three punts for touchdowns. A high point in the season came with a 28-6 win over North, where the team realized it could go undefeated.

Coaches Bill Stiegmeier's and David Oliver's stressing of fundamentals gave favorable results as the White Team outplayed most of its opponents with a 5-2-1 finish. Starting slow, the squad's turning point came in a near victory over KC Southeast's Jr. Varsity Team. With confidence in its ability restored, the team allowed only six points in its last four outings, winning all of them.

Cross country reconstruction overwhelms all

Generalized as a "team just starting its rebuilding process", the Varsity Cross Country squad surprised everyone and ended its season with an 8-1 record. The seven member team suffered its only loss at state in Wamego, finishing second to Wichita Southeast by three points. According to Coach Verlyn Schmidt, the state loss resulted not from the team's performance but instead from a "percentage or number's game defeat". Senior Bill Gordon displayed perseverance at state as he ran the race with a broken bone in his foo and still finished in twelth place.

Varying workouts according to the opposition, the squad ran an average of ten miles daily. Senior letterman Bill Smith won the league individua championship along with his second All-State title. A good attitude cooperation and much determination paid off as the goal oriented team won its tenth consecutive trophy in state competition, tying a state record.

Harriers gain perfect record

Long ten mile practices, combined with routine calisthenics beginning in late August, paid off for the Raiders when the Junior Varsity Cross Country Team again accomplished an undefeated season of seven wins and no losses. Rivaled by S.M. East, the seven man team ran over the 200th victory mark for South. Another mark of achievement granted by the team is a tied record of having won 10 consecutive trophies at state. Dan Grieser and Dan Gibbs added strength to the team.

Going into the final meet of the season, the Raider "C" Cross Country Team held a consecutive record of 76 wins and no losses. Interrupting this unique record, the team suffered its first loss in South history at the S.M. Northwest Invitational. Overtaken by Leavenworth, the Raiders came in second. Coached by Verlyn Schmidt, the team had many participants who proved themselves as strong runners. A large amount of school support also aided the team in its quest for a successful season.

Entire squad finishes season

Rarely does a team finish a season with exactly the same members it began with. However, this statement proved truthful in the case of the first year for a full girls' cross country program at South. The squad, composed of 11 girls of all grade levels, had to continually make adjustments throughout the year, such as practicing with the boys' cross country team and sharing Coach Verlyn Schmidt with them also. Problems the girls encountered during the year included a need for a more definitive mental approach as well as realizing that the ability to endure pain takes much time to build up.

Running both one and two mile races, the girls competed in a total of five meets. The squad captured third place at the South Invitational and finished in seventh place at the League meet where the girls faced their stiffest competition. Sophomore Jana Muir ran consistently in second place until suffering an injury late in the season.

New methods add strength to tennis team

Basing his strategy on learning about techniques of opponents, Coach Duane Gabrielson guided both the girls' varsity and junior varsity tennis teams to nearly perfect records. The twelve member varsity squad, which included nine seniors, suffered its only loss of the season in dual competition against SM East and finished the year 7-1, as did the junior varsity team. Capturing first place at the league match, the squad went on to qualify five out of six girls for the state tournament where Sue Clark added her third straight single title to her numerous ac complishments.

Eliminated early at the stat match by top seeds, the two double teams of Meg Cundiff—team captai Cathy Womack and Patt Rowe—Chris Copeland otherwis played consistently well throughou the season. An added incentive fo the varsity members was receiving special T-shirt from Coac Gabrielson for winning a match 6-0 6-0.

Interest leaps for Girls' Golf in second year

Increased competition for placement on the Girls Golf Team proved that even in its second year of existence, it had qualified as a full power Raider sport. Shawnee Mission schools participated in state wide tournaments for the second year and have made themselves known, particularly South. Five of the twelve girl team returned as lettermen, including the 1975 state medalist, Lew Ellen Erickson. Having several underclassmen, the team has hopes of coming back strong next year.

Consistently in the top three, Lew Ellen again proved to be the outstanding player on the team. The two girl team consisting of Lew Ellen and Susie Shanks placed an impressive second in the Wichita Invitational, whereas the four girl team of Lew Ellen, Susie Shanks, Jill Brown and Joni Blair also placed second in the Regional State Tournament. According to coach Dick Booth, a major advantage held by this year's team included a steady stream of improvement with each girl.

Coaches spark team's success

Three years of unity proved profitable as confidence in skills paid off in an impressive 14-5 standing for the Varsity Volleyball Team. Led by new Coach Sheri Brosseau, the girls owed their success to balanced talent as the team capitalized on each girl's strong points, especially Lisa Plummer's and Becky Griffith's spiking abilities. After losing to North in their first meeting, the Raiders' season highlight occurred when they overcame the Indians to take third in the league tournament.

The Junior Varsity Team ended with a respectable 6-8 record. The two sophomore squads completed an unblemished season with a record of 11 wins and no defeats. Drilling fundamental techniques into the team, first year coach David Gray felt the sophomores demonstrated quick learning skills which accounted for their prosperous season. Encouraged by team leader Janet Lundstrom, the girls captured the Sophomore District Title by beating all other Shawnee Mission schools.

Second year successful with strong support

A stronger amount of school support helped the Girls Varsity Basketball Team achieve a winning season. Staring on the Varsity line-up, Lisa Plummer, Lori Hill, Susie Leonard, Debbie Disch, Nancy Stetson, Kim Galbreath and Sharon Skaggs, consistently kept their individual as well as team statistics at an all time high. Highlighting the season, the annual South Invitational Tournament held Jan. 19-22, put the Raiders at the top of the Sunflower League ladder. In this tournament, Lisa Plummer proved her basketball expertise once again when voted into the All Tournament Coaches Team. Other notable happenings in the tournament involved the scoring by all 12 team members in the bout with St. Theresa and the 46-34 win over previously unbeaten Bishop Miege. Coached by Ron Millard, the team had many challenges throughout the season. Keeping the winning Raider spirit in mind, the girls competed from November to March. Girls finished the season as sub-state champs.

Comprised of only seven girls for the first games of the season, the junior varsity basketball squad relied more on team strength rather than individual power as they comprised the smallest team in number in the entire district. After the seventh game of the season however, Coach Howard Mischlich began bringing up two different girls from the sophomore squads to play in the JV matches in order to give them valuable playing experience, as well as to rest his own JV players.

The year began in December with a most important 14 point victory over arch rivals, Lawrence High School, in which Alicia Smither scored a game high 15 points. The stiffest district competition, ever, forced the girls to excel beyond the basics, as they continually learned, practiced and executed more varied plays than last year. Lisa Goss and Kathy Cramer fulfilled their responsibilities in the post positions most advantageously as both girls developed into the leading scorers of the team.

Consistency throughout the season paid off for the Green and Gold sophomore teams as they each averaged over 35 points a game. Specific team skills strengthened in the areas of overall shooting ability, rebounding and speed as the girls battled varsity squads from private schools, as well as Shawnee Mission sophomore cagers. While the Gold Team suffered a four point loss in a close battle with William Chrisman, both teams put together season bests in victories against SM West.

Center victory serves as peak of trying season

Confidence, concentration and consistency through four quarters of play paid off for the varsity basketball team as they reigned victorious in a 58-48 win over the defending Missouri Class L champions, Center High School. Highlighted by a first quarter 16-10 lead, the triumph occurred in the second round of the Center Tournament in January.

Unfortunately, that victory did not depict the rest of the season as the cagers took more than their share of lumps from then on. With only one returning letterman, senior Dan Pirotte, the squad lacked the veteran knowledge needed to build a championship team. Plagued by excessive illnesses and numerous injuries in addition to experienced opposition, the cagers frequently had to play catch-up the final half after falling behind in the second quarter. Speculating on next years squad, Coach Dudley Geise felt an increase in returning lettermen would provide the valuable and necessary team depth.

Unity apparent in close JV games

The Junior Varsity Cagers put forth a large amount of effort, facing tough competition throughout the season. The team consistently worked together as a unit, especially in cases of close scoring games. In early January, the Raiders defeated the SM North Indians by a score of 39-37. In the last 47 seconds, Jim Wehrwein successfully sank two free throw baskets for the Raider victory. The JV team also contributed many of its talents to the Varsity team efforts.

Spencer says team's scoring best attribute

Larry Hare, the Green Team's most consistent player, led the way to victory in the first outing, by scoring 23 points against SM Northwest. Despite numerous injuries, the Green squad, coached by Bill Spencer, shined offensively as the team averaged almost 60 points a game. A high point in the season occurred, after an earlier 13 point loss to Washington, when the squad later beat them by 20 points. The Sophomore Tournament, usually held at the season's end, came in the middle, giving the teams a chance to observe each other and work on their weaknesses.

The Gold Squad, led by Coach David Oliver, exhibited hustle, determination and a desire to play well, which paid off as the team came out on top in its first six games. They also excelled under pressure, coming from behind twice to defeat SM East and the North Indians. A total team effort served as the reason for the squad's success, with the reserves proving as dependable as the starters.

Strict training enhances skill for Raidermen

Growing popularity in the sport of wrestling proved true for the Raiders this year. A large number of sophomore recruits competed with upperclassmen for a weight placement on the Junior Varsity and Varsity squads. Long rigorous practices combined with strict dieting to attain a weight class. The Raidermen confirmed this stringent training helpful as they went on to place first in many duals. Competition started in late fall and ended in mid-February.

Head coach Guy Malone assisted by Bill King and Bruce Roach, guided the grapplers through long practices everyday. The team also consisted of five returning lettermen. Allan Gardner, Steve Smith, Scott Luschen, Chuck Vanasse and Jon McGuire kept their outstanding records by scoring high in meets and tournaments. Strong leadership shown by captains Scott Luschen, Steve Smith and Chuck Vanasse also helped the team.

Team alters practice times

Headed by Coach Bruce Bove and new assistant Keith Allen, the Raider Swimming and Diving Team made changes in its practice times because of the starting of school a half hour earlier. Both J.V. and Varsity, consisting of two-thirds underclassmen, practiced after school until six, making for crowded workouts, but a more competitive atmosphere. The squad, emphasizing weight training more than in previous years, won five of their seven dual meets and placed in the top three in three separate invitational meets.

Encouraged by captains Brian McGowan and Scott Baldwin, the team relied on consistency in the IM, medley relay, back and breast stroke. Individual stand out performances came from Senior Scott Baldwin, nick-named "iron man" for his endurance in practices, Junior Pat Boppart in sprint freestyle races, Sophomore Gardner Wright who excelled in the backstroke events and senior diver, Russ Meyer.

The season's lowest point took place in Lawrence at the Lebombarb Invitational where 12 schools competed, and the team finished sixth. When reflecting back over the season, Coach Brouillette felt the meet developed into the year's "turning point, when the boys finally realized the necessity for a victory." The first place league title convinced the team members that with more individual effort and strong team determination, another state championship could be achieved.

Exceptional talent in floor exercise led to a new school record as Roger Syng scored an 8.7 at regionals and went on to finish fourth in the state meet held at South. Junior Greg Randall not only captured the top two positions in long horse and parallel bars at state, but also set a new meet and state record with his 7.83 all round performance. In a post-season interview, Coach Brouillette named Randy Seibert and Roger Syng honorary captains and also expressed faith in next year's squad.

For gymnasts, effort on vault strongest point

The change from a spring to a fall sport met general approval from the Girl's Gymnastics Team, coached by Billie Rice, as the season passed more quickly without the interference of winter vacation. The 18 member team, led by captain Cyndi Overholser, consisted of six returning letter holders. Showing strength on the vault, the squad set a new school record of 26.2. Individual stand out Debbie Desmarteau, who consistently did well as the team's all-round performer, also established a new school record on the uneven parallel bars.

Hosting their first invitational meet, the Raiders captured second place out of six teams. To highlight the season, the girl's placed fourth at the Regional Meet with their best score of the year, 91.4, allowing them to participate in the State Meet held in Wichita. At State the team took fifth as sophomore Kelly McKessor placed sixth on the vault. With only four seniors leaving the squad, hopes for a strong team next year are high.

Girls integrate extracurricular basketball fun

Intramural Basketball took on a new twist with the appearance of girls on the court competing with the same goal in mind as the boys; basketball competition with a relaxed attitude of "come when you can". Six girl teams actively participated in the program. Nicknames for the teams included the Foxy Ladies, Tequilla Chasers and Gabes Babes. A big turnout in the boy's section continued with 32 teams. Various original titles such as the Average White Team, Fun Gunners, Stuffers and The Cherry Pickers graced the weekly schedule posted outside the cafeteria. The faculty kept up the tradition of their two teams, namely Faculty Team #1 and Faculty Team #2. Students served as referees, receiving one dollar per game. The intramural season started the first week in December and extended until March, ending with a tournament. Organized and supervised by Tim Burkendine, teams played all week and weekends. Reigning as champs, the hitmen won their bout over faculty team #1.

Unity, pride new goals started for sophomores

Instilling pride in their class became the main goal for the Sophomore Class Officers. In association with the "Unity" theme initiated by the Senior Class, President Brett Milbourn made the ideas of his peers known to StuCo in an effort to get students involved in school. With the help of sponsor Bill Tiegreen, the officers attempted to record not only the ideas, but also the achievements of the Sophomore Class, expressing hope that this policy would continue.

Collection of money to finance next year's Prom filled the major part of the Sophomores' duties. Treasurer Lori Phillips hoped to try her innovative ideas for fund-raising, such as a sophomore party, as an alternative to the traditional manner of collection of class dues. The officers wished to provide other student-oriented activities in addition to Prom.

Class officers attempt Prom at different place

The main duty of the junior class officers consisted of continual class pride and the total planning and procedure of the Junior-Senior Prom on April 30. The Junior officers, President Juli Crabtree, Vice-President Patti Levin, Secretary Kathy Lefko and Treasurer Debbie Mayberry constantly had their hands full with ideas to raise money and theme ideas for the '77 Prom. For the first time new attempts to hold Prom outside of Johnson County Community College were made, causing the officers to bring their plans to the South Area Advisory Board for a final approval. The active committees which aided the officers in their production of Prom consisted of a fund raising committee, publicity, invitations, construction, candy sales and a T-shirt committee. All helped to add money and a more avid class participation.

Plans plague seniors in unity throughout area

Unity and Southern Hospitality proved to be the theme created by the senior officers under the leadership of President Pennie Ramos, Vice-President Fred Tanzer, Secretary Lisa Plummer and Treasurer David Dyer. The duties of the officers included plans for the senior day activities, the after Prom party held at Bananas with dancing and various games, and ideas for the senior gift. Conducting auditions and practices for the senior talent show proved to be quite a task for all involved, but kept morale high.

The fourth hour block allowed class meetings to inform seniors on activities and projects such as dues collection and class of '77 T shirt sales. An all district picnic was planned for seniors from the other Shawnee Mission schools to meet and achieve a better relationship and understanding among the various schools.

Sponsoring the "Up with People" performances in collaboration with StuCo proved to be very rewarding and enjoyable for both students and participants.

My years at South are very happy ones, but only so because of the beautiful friendships and special people to me! People are what count to me, I sincerely feel I have deeply enriched my life, especially my last two years, by the friendships of some very special people that I'll always care for and love. Beav—The future now is at our doorstep, frightening that it may be, I believe we'll make it together! Right?! Kristi—Well, it's all over, can you believe it? Love is a beautiful thought without a cause, a shoulder to cry on when the going gets bad, a Heaven without the clouds, a smile someone is willing to share, a warm hand to take in stride, a kind word that enters your heart, and above all, a wonderful thing. These 3 years at South have molded my future, but now it's on to better things like KU and Joyce. Take care AF & JB. I'll never forget DS, KM & MK.

Well it's all over, where do we go from here?
Our destiny can be far or it could be near.
What will happen to the friends we once knew?
Some will marry, some will die, some will be successful,
Others will just continue to try.
I hope everyone has a long and happy life. —J.J.

1. With the addition of several new shopping centers in the past few years, shopping in the Overland Park area has had an increase of popularity as a pastime. The Wycliff West Shoppes serve the public living in the Wycliff area. Although the neighborhood in the surrounding area enjoys the convenience of the new shops, the problem of the re-routed traffic through the neighborhood is not welcome. 2. More new shops are present at 95th and Nall.

The desire for friendship is strong in every human heart. We crave the companionship of those who can understand. The nostalgia of life presses. We sigh for "home" and long for the presence of one who sympathizes with our aspiration, our hopes and is able to partake our joys. One can bear grief, but it takes two to be glad. This year is for beginnings when the world is fresh and new, when we shape our dreams of all the things we plan and hope to do. A year for maturing when we think, work, and grow. If you think you are beaten, you are. If you'd like to win, but think you can't, it's a cinch you won't. If you think you'll lose, you're lost. For out in the world we find success begins with a fellow's will, it's all a state of mind. If you think you're outclassed, you are; you've got to think high to rise. You've got to be sure of yourself before you can ever win a prize. Life's battles don't always go to the stronger or faster man—but sooner or later the man who wins is the man who thinks he can.

A life time can last forever with all the memories of friends it holds inside. Though we'll soon be going our separate ways, remember the unforgettable times we had together. I will remember it forever with special memories of Soc. Sec., Brick feet, Horny, Baby, Shar, and Kim-Lawn. Thanks! I close my letter with these last words: Be happy. Grow in Christ. Pay attention to what I have said. Live in harmony and peace. And may the love of God and peace be with you.

Good Luck to BE, AM, LM, and all the other people that made my life happy.

1. A busy magazine rack constantly appeals to many students. 2. Phil Rambow aids to combat the increasing library demands.

1. Kim Ballard, junior, joyfully tosses old materials to the floor as she begins the end-of-year locker clean out. For many students this is a time of discovery and wonder, as they find out that the bottom of their locker really does exist after all. 2. When following in the wake of the exiting stampede, one finds it necessary to wade through a sea of debris. Out-going students never seem to care exactly what they leave behind, as long as it is not of excessive value. Books, paper, notebooks, pencils, pens, and clothes can all be uncovered in the wreckage that remains behind.

SMS Green Pep Band

The Shawnee Mission South Green Pep Band is a highly spirited group of students comprised of the best musicians in the band program. They can be seen cavorting and frollicking merrily through the brightly lit corridors of S.M.S. seemingly oblivious to school regulations, as well as common sense. The Pep Band performs throughout the year and spends many long hours for little or no tangible recognition. In the words of their beloved leader, President Martin Green, "Our band this year is the best in South's history, and the first one that can really cook! I'm proud to be associated with such a fine group of guys (and gal), even though they are at times a little mischievous. They are also rude, degenerate, unreliable, irresponsible, disrespectful, and totally uncooperative."

TRUMPETS: (Zah! Zircon Encrusted Tweezers!) In flight—Cabot Sweeney, Bill Wheeler, Tumbles Compton, Ken Sanders, Dave Simes, Marty Green.

DRUMS: "Assasinate the B.F.! It's lampshade time for you!" Bob Meridan, Anonymous B.F., Dave Pai.

SAXES: ". . . It's working!" Scott Grant, Paul Bastin, Reed Garrett, Marion Hoogstraten, Steve Dinneen, DouglaShorter Talley.

TROMBONES: ". . . On the road to perfection." Steve Adams, Kurt Pohl, Ben Stephenson.

BARITONES: "Low brass cooks!" Kelly Mack, Jay Beatty, Al Kuhl.

AND GOD SAID. "LET THERE BE APES" "AND THIS ALSO HAS BEEN ONE OF THE DARK PLACES of the EARTH."

See to it that no one takes you captive through PHILOSOPHY AND EMPTY DECEPTION.

"If you wish to master her, you must strike her and beat her."

Here's one Kansas City team that keeps on winning!

In the top ten is pretty good — considering. For the past 9 years, these people have kept Hafkemeyer Motors high on the sales and service charts of BMW, Bavarian Motor Works of North America.

Except for the large coastal cities, more BMW's have been sold by Hafkemeyer BMW than any other dealership . . . including Chicago. And we are exclusively a Bavarian Motor Works dealership.

For 4 years in a row Hafkemeyer's Service Department has earned a top award from BMW for outstanding performance and service facilities.

There are hundreds of people in greater Kansas City who can afford . . . and appreciate the quality of . . . these outstanding and somewhat exclusive German-made automobiles. If you are one of those who is not familiar with the BMW, come in and get acquainted.

You might decide to join our winning team.

The ultimate driving machine.

Although last year I thought I knew what producing and editing a yearbook would involve, it's incredible how little I really know even now. I have learned two very important lessons, however. First, you can never rely totally on anyone but yourself. Second, whenever you work with any group of people, you must keep your mind open to new ideas and be willing to compromise and not regret your decision. If you are afraid to change, life will be very boring. If you regret the changes you have made and dwell on the fact, you will kill yourself inside.

Thanks M.J., for your time, Jen for your support, and Dave, for your unlimited talent and diversity. We couldn't have done it without you. The year was perfect, because as John Kennedy said, "When things are noncontroversial, beautifully coordinated, and all the rest, it must be that not much is going on."

Kristi Smith

Special memories are associated with the '77 Heritage. The growth and understanding I have felt this year and last will never be lost. My sincere thanks go to my two staff members, Kathy and Janice, whom I deeply love and will miss. You guys are great! Kristi, M.J. and all the rest of the editors gang, some how and some way we will get back together to share our special memories associated with South and the '77 Heritage. Thank you for letting me be a part. I have loved every minute of it, and can't begin to explain how I could have made it without my super staff and great friends to have worked with these past two years!

Jennifer Beardsley

How could I locate anything without my wall of office passes, notes and assorted trash? Would it be possible for me to survive without the "ooo-la-la", "new air" and the couple of the day? And those jovial faces with pasted-on smiles of who I don't. But with Vicki's, Rachel's and Karen's assistance I've watched the closet clutter be transformed into the student body section, which in turn takes its place among the pages of the Heritage. And so it's with all this madness that I leave you now.

Paula Stratemeier

Through much determination and effort we have produced the 1976-77 Heritage for your enjoyment. It was by no means an easy or rapid process. Considering this, it is my hope that

Nine months ago, a group of 26 people began to compile a book which would forever relate the '76-'77 school year. And as the year progressed, so did the book, thanks to the dedication and the devotion of every staff member especially Kristi and M.J. At first, no one thought a group of innocent girls could put together the sports section . . . but we did. Karen and Carla, I couldn't have worked with two better people. Burger King, McDonalds, a tiny yellow Karmann Giah flooded with coke and a raspberry shake without a straw all added together to make the year one of my best. The decisions made, (black or white?) and the fun we shared this past year will form my memories of tomorrow. Thanks for the great times and may this school be forever blessed with loyal photographers as in years gone by.

you will appreciate and treasure our production. I also hope that many years from now you will be able to turn the pages of this book and recall many fond memories from this year at South. I am extremely grateful for this experience, so thanks must go to the staff for giving me such a great feeling of accomplishment and warm friendship. Special thanks to Sara and Diane, who without their help, common sense and memory, I would have lost my mind!

Nancy Ruppin

To you who care: Thank you for sharing that special part with me. Thank you Susie and Mary for being you because sharing with you has made my year more beautiful. I will miss you. Always remember God loves you so believe in yourself.

I love you.

Barb Dixon

The mixture of ideals basic to the 1977 Heritage, quality and creativity with a pinch of idealism, was an old family recipe difficult to combine. As the staff members trying desperately to uphold those ideals, we found that starting from scratch, using only the finest ingredients, and finding those secret touches of spice that add so much is not the easiest way to bake, but oh, the difference in taste! To my fellow chefs, every effort was worth it. Don't ever let that special recipe be lost.

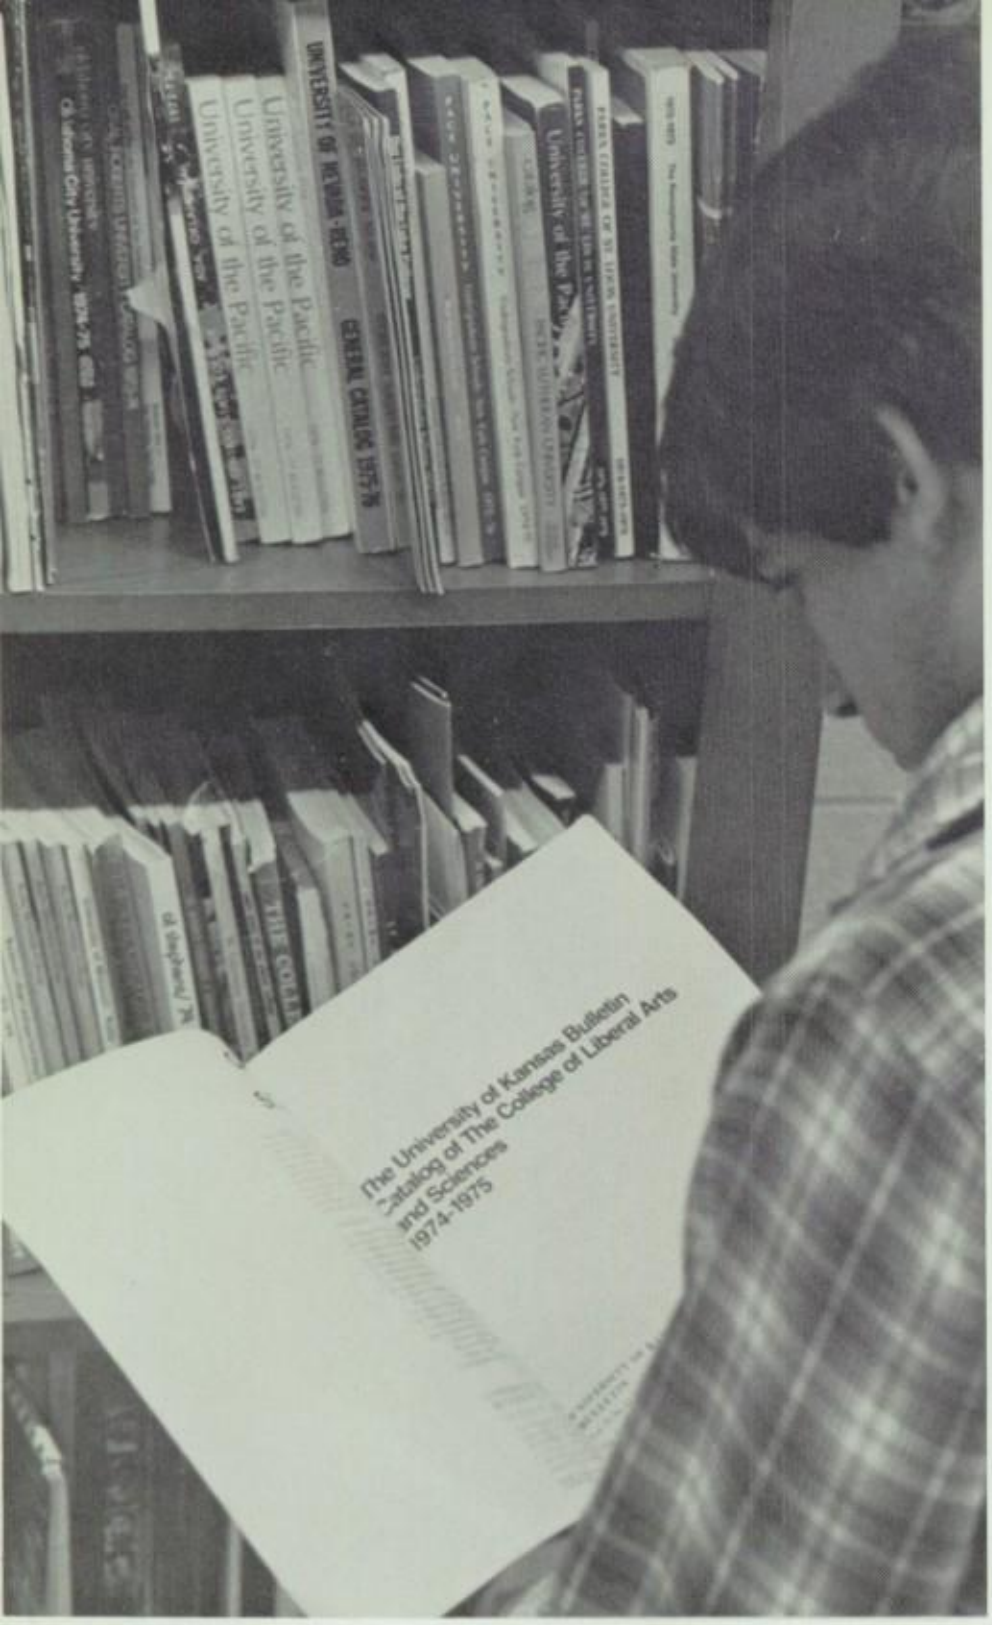
Risa Klebax

Words cannot express the joy and fulfillment I've received from spending two years on the yearbook staff. I consider myself fortunate to have been a part of it. To Rachel and Karen, thanks for putting in your time and effort; it was rough once in a while, but it was a lot of fun. To each member of the Heritage Staff, thanks, because it wouldn't have been possible if we all hadn't pulled together. Finishing this book I hope everyone will receive as much enjoyment and memories as I have. Enjoy it!

Vicki Culp

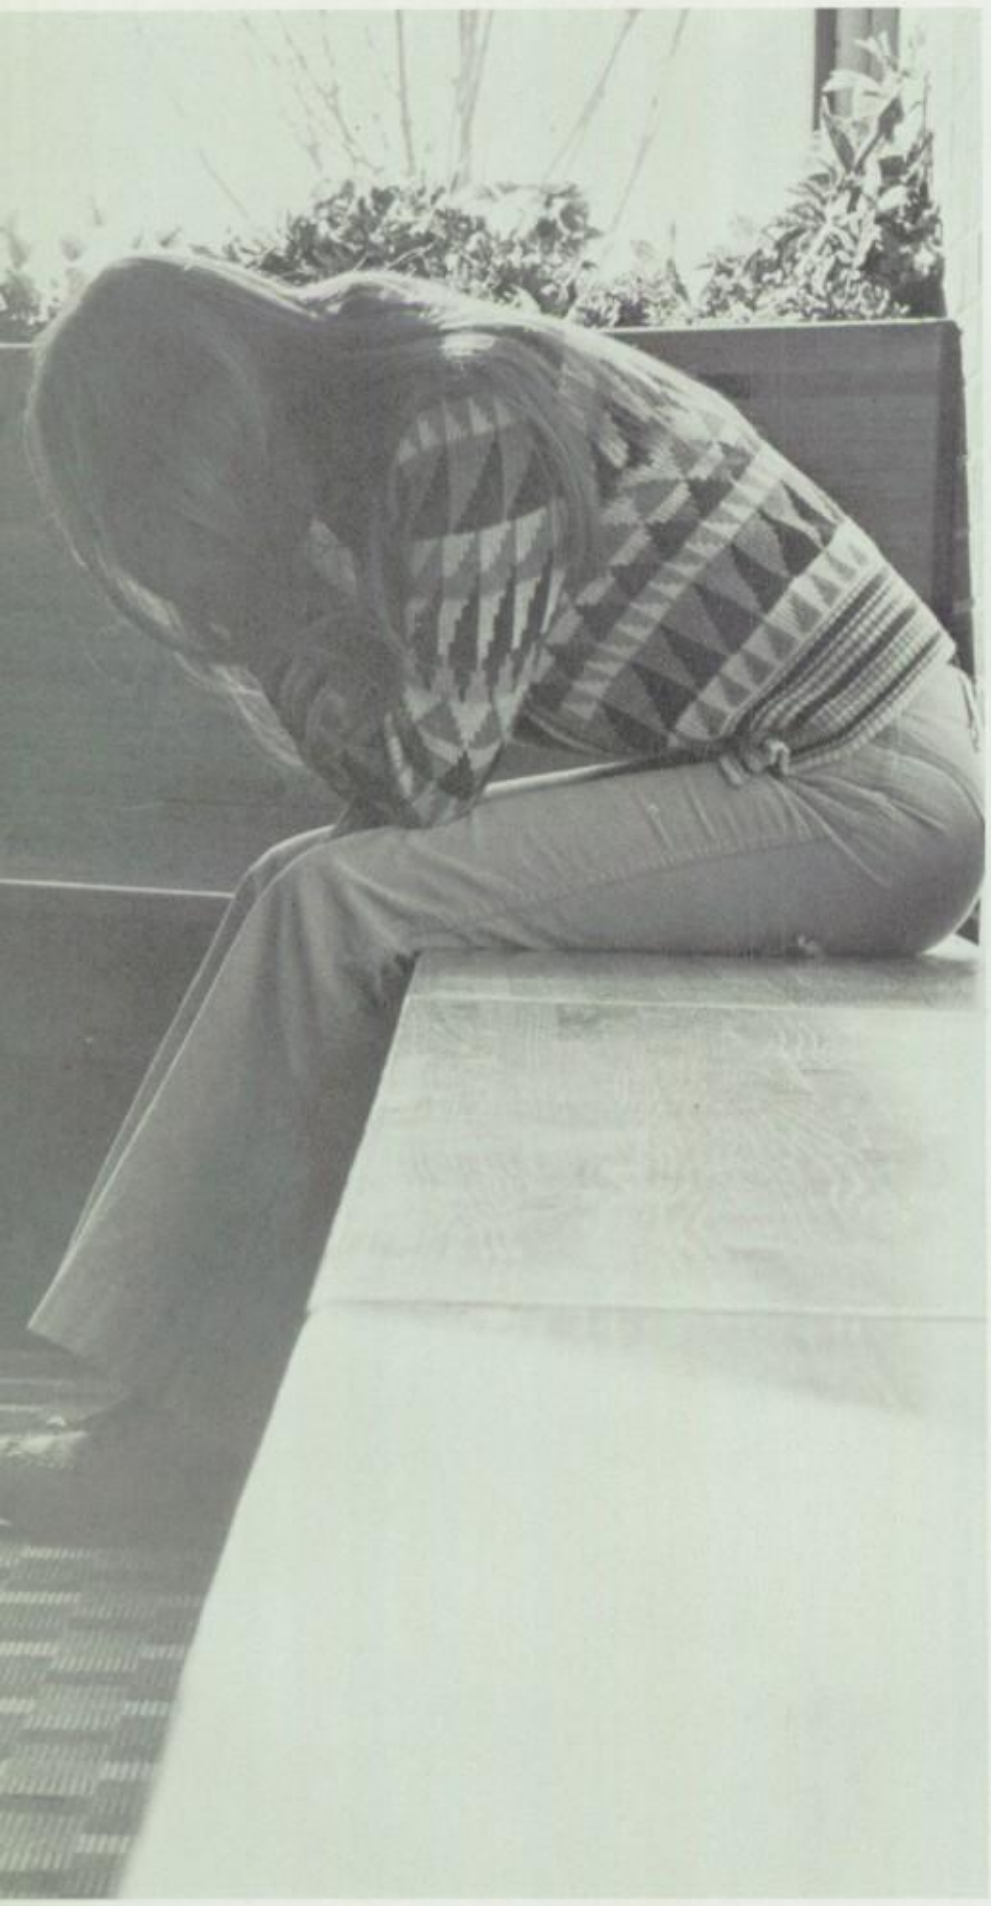
To say "thank you" to everyone in a dozen ways would be redundant; it's already been run into the ground on this page. And anyway there are no words that can express accurately the appreciation I have for the people who have so unselfishly sacrificed their time and labor to capture the essence of this school year. To my staff, Kim and Jane, thanks for knowing what you were doing so I wouldn't have to ride herd on you—telling people how to tie their shoes gets annoying. To my fellow editors, no amount of criticism from students or faculty will be able to erase the pride that we have in what we've done. This memory that we've created cannot belong totally to anyone but us.

Dave Kraus

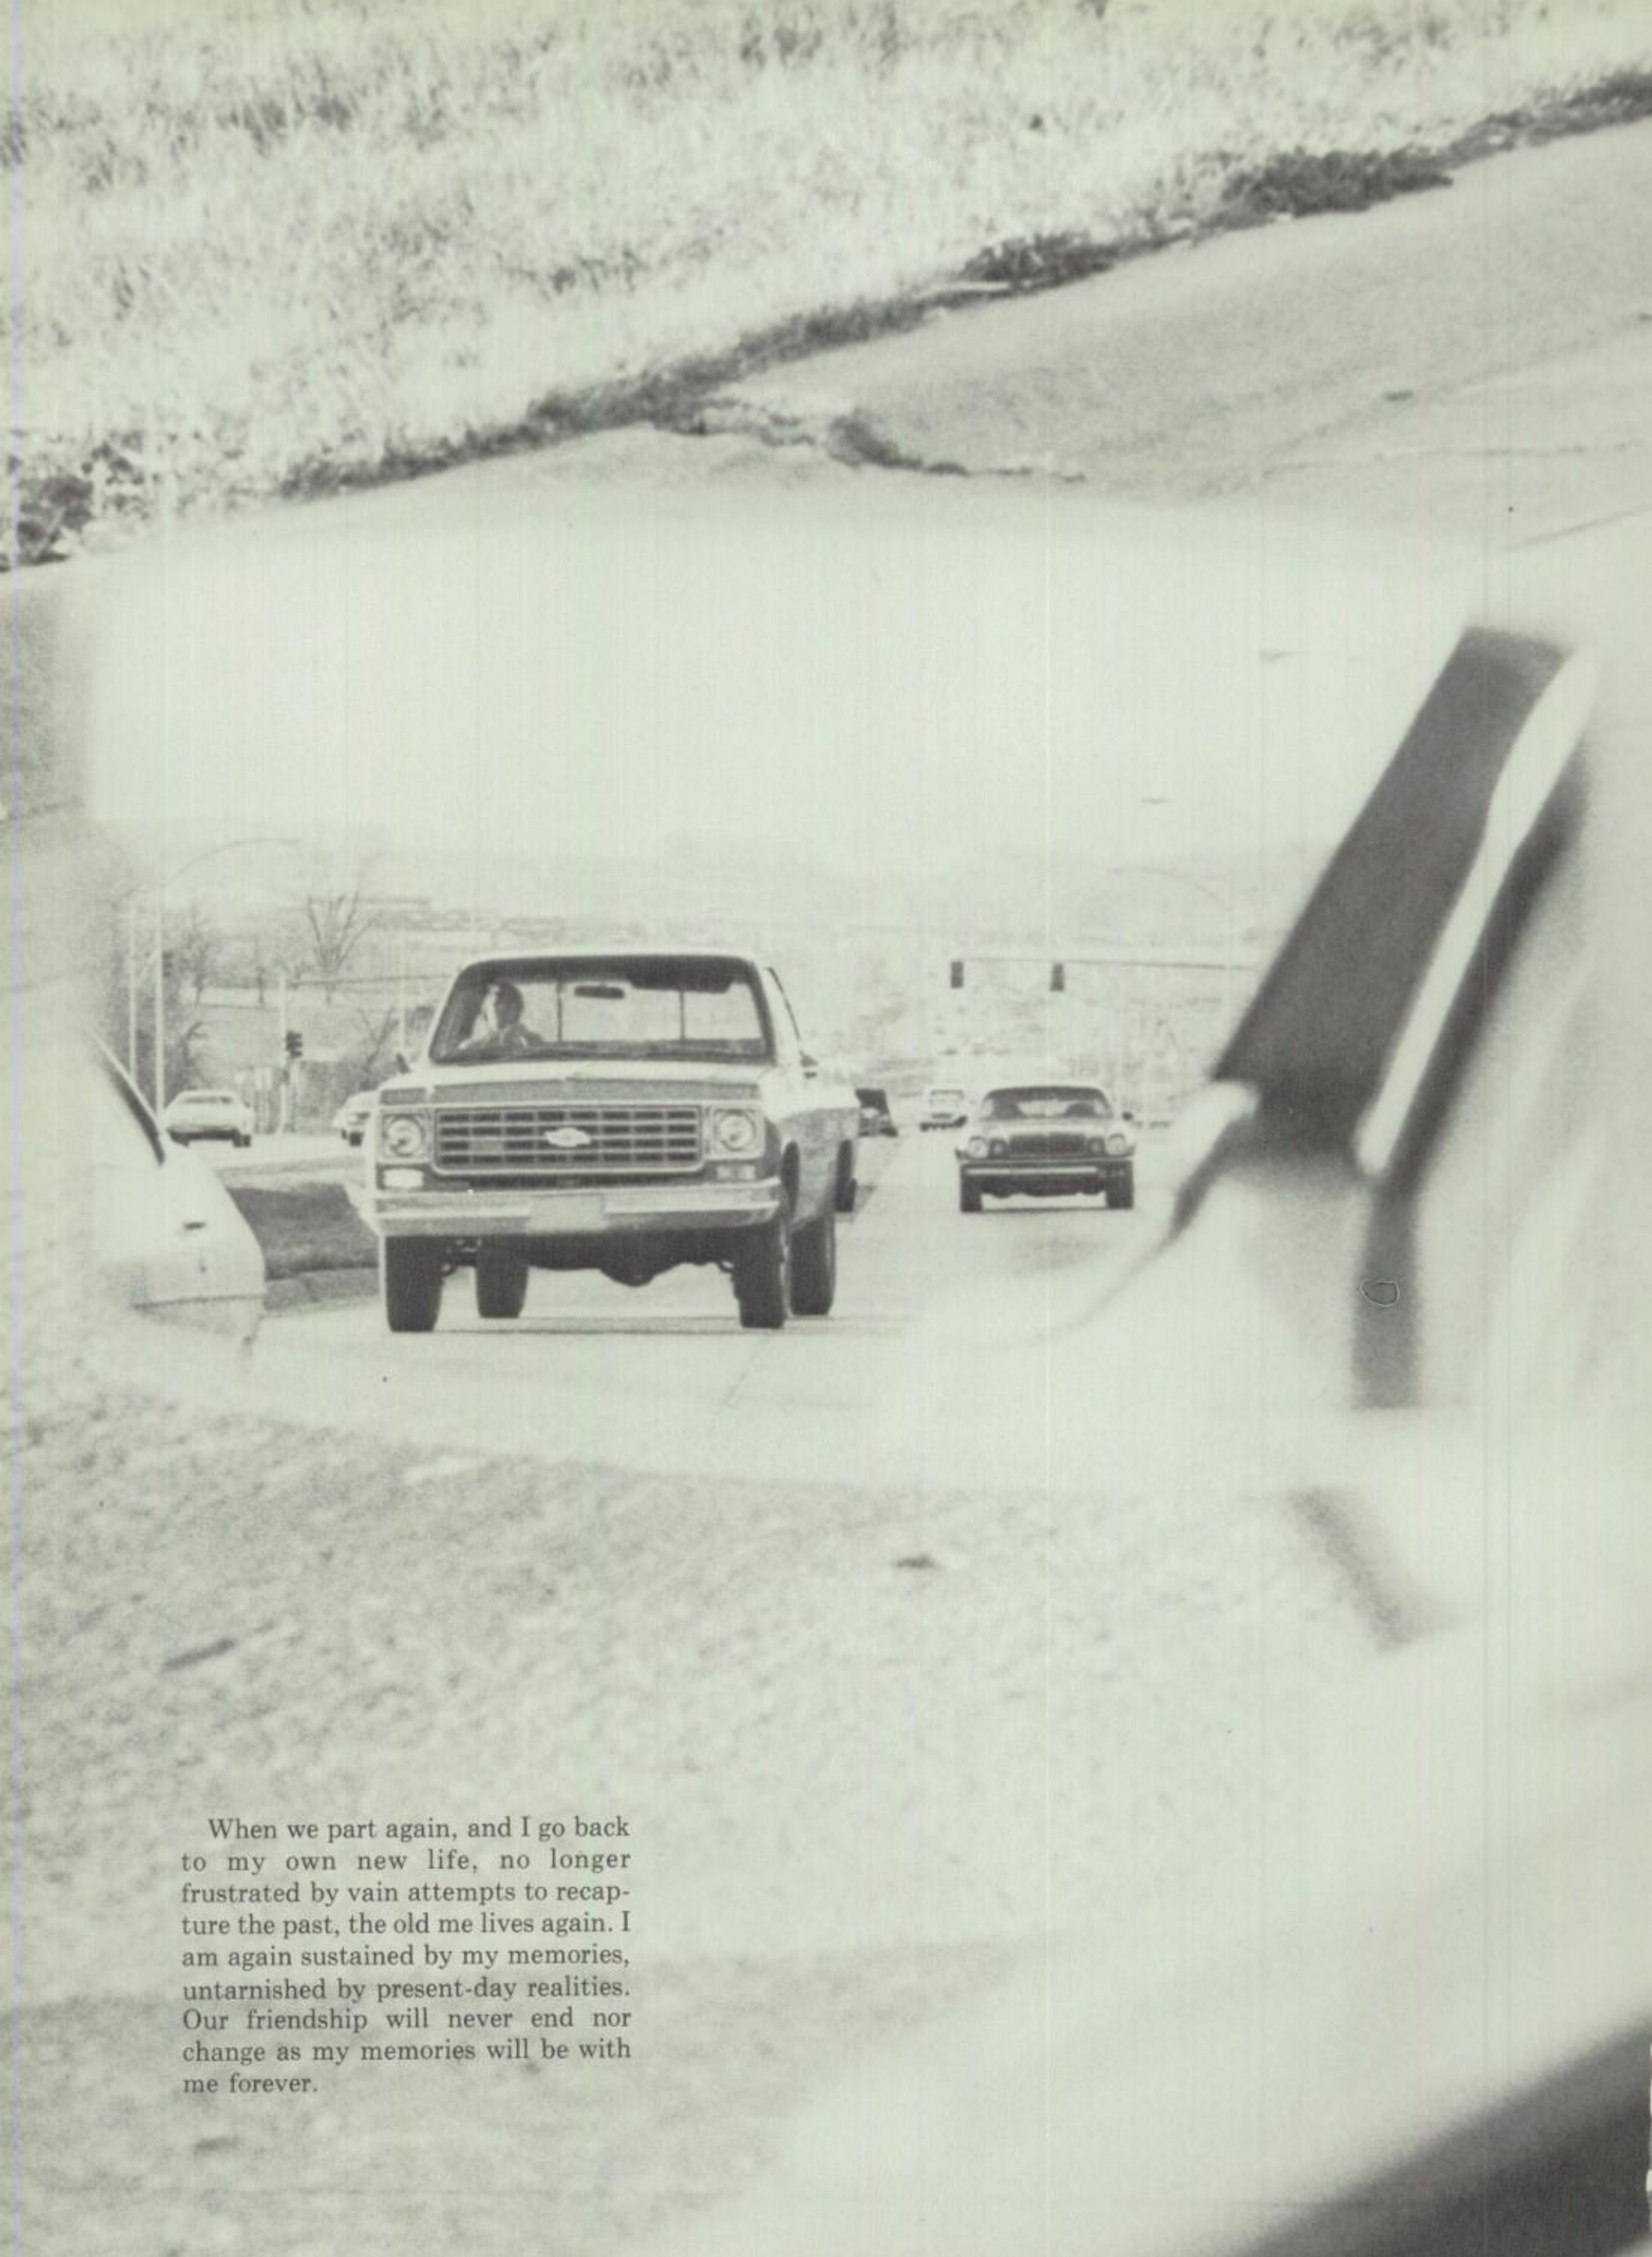


My friends and I have grown together, formed opinions together and had fun together so that a part of each of our lives contains part of the other.

But when we leave, this small part of ourselves will lie dormant as the remainder grows and changes independently. I remember my friends as static, while they, too, are changing, their lives taking turns unrelated to mine.



And when I see then again, the changes have destroyed it all. We are no longer the people we used to be. A part of me, the old me, is dead. The thought of such a loss saddens me.



When we part again, and I go back to my own new life, no longer frustrated by vain attempts to recapture the past, the old me lives again. I am again sustained by my memories, untarnished by present-day realities. Our friendship will never end nor change as my memories will be with me forever.
